religious ceremonies. Do you think that's a good thing to do, to allow?

SENATOR Dw. PEDERSEN: I have no problem with that, Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Where do you think it would be best for them to drink, in the alley or in church?

SENATOR Dw. PEDERSEN: Senator Chambers, neither place if you're talking about just drink for drink's sake.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But we are not talking about drinking for drinking's sake. We're talking about narrowing in on some language that allows an exemption for drinking. So I want to get your thoughts on it if you're willing to share them with me. Does drinking alcohol have more to do with the life of the alley or the life of the church in your view?

SENATOR Dw. PEDERSEN: I don't think either one. Drinking has to do with the individual.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Do you find most people who drink, drink in the alley or drink in the church?

SENATOR Dw. PEDERSEN: Neither one of them is a big number that I've noticed.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Where do the ones you know drink?

SENATOR Dw. PEDERSEN: Well, they drink at parties and they drink at bars. They drink at gatherings on the beach, at the...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Okay, well, let's talk about winos then. Let's talk about winos. Do most winos drink on the street and in the alley?

SENATOR Dw. PEDERSEN: If you're talking about people who...

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Who drink wine.
